For the Re c c of Miners.

A foreign authority on mining machinery of all kinds says that the "Galibest respiratory apparatus," designed to faci tate the rescue of imprisoned miners, by scoplying air othere cue's, is the most practi 1. It consisof a reservoir of air with flexible attachments of light weight, which the operator carries on his back after having first filled it with a by means of a small up which forms part of the arrangement.

The filting is done in less than a min-ue. The air contained in the reser-voir is communicated to the lungs by means of two tubes ending in a montapiece, which the operator puts in his mouth, in which he fixes it by a slight pressure of the teeth. The air of the eservoir thus reaches him without any effort on his part, and is cent back with the same facility into the same re-

This arrangement allows a man to breathe the same air over again several times for quite an extended time, varying according to the everators from 15 to 25 and even 33 minutes. The operator can ascertain from his breathing when it is time to return to the fresh in the above a country the respective beautiful and the state of the same and the same and the same as a country the respective products of the same and the same as a country the respective products and the same as a country the respective products are same as a same than the same air, where he can empty the re ervoir of the foul and fill it with good air. The apparatus is a great auxiliary in receiving persons from suffocation, whether in cases of fire on the surface

An electric lamp which accompanies the respirator has been improved by Mr. Charles Law. It is a primary bat tery, incandescent lamp, so arranged that by reversing it by turning it upside down, it lights and the battery is in netion; when the other side is up the fluid is not in contact with the cells and it can be left in that position until wanted, and can be used instantly. The advantage the lamp has, when used by a rescue party after a mine explosion, is that it will burn in black-damp, so that the party may proceed immediate ly into the mine after an explosion without waiting for the renewal of the ventilation. It has been found that the lamp will not fire carbureted hydrogen. Such an apparatus, together with the electric light, is calculated to be of the greatest service to miners and mine operators, and if it had been on the premises at the recent fire in one of the western mines, when three lives were lost through the choke-damp, tacy would have been rescued.

THER KILLED BY HIS MATE. -- AS heretofore stated, in a fight at the Roger Williams Park Menagerie at Providence, R. I., on Wednesday Prince, a royal Bengal tiger, was killed by his mate, Princess, after a desperate battle. Prince was well-known to showmen, and before he was captured he had killed three hunters at the foot of the Himalayas. the Himalayas.

He was purchased by the commissioners for $1000, which is much below his market value, but his ugly disposition depreciated his price. "Prince" tion depreciated his price. "Prince" has been showing his fighting disposition lately and Wednesday morning he sprang upon his mate, who laid back her ears on her head and laid out her

The tigers came together in their attle and tore each other's backs with their teeth. Prince seemed to have the best of the battle for a time, but Princess broke away from him and leaped upon her adversary. For half an hour the battle raged and the blood spurted in all directions. The cage and immediate vicinity tooked like a slaughter house. Finally Princess set her teeth in her mate's neck and held him until he was dead. She tore the MENTS and MACHINERY,
